NSTL manager debunks chemical leak reports

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

Jerry Hlass, National Space Technology Laboratories' manager Friday said recent newspaper reports of herbicide Agent Orange leakage at the facility were "inaccurate, erroneous and misleading."

The Baton Rouge, La. 'Morning Advocate' and Jackson 'Clarion Ledger' daily newspapers both published articles which state employees with a private firm surveying for waste leakage at an NSTL chemical dumping area found a chemical odor in the area.

Hlass said reports alleging he overruled objections to dumping herbicide contaminated materials at the site to impress the Department of Defense were also "inaccurate and false."

Both Hlass and Dr. Bill Wolverton, NSTL environmental officer and Earth Resources director, Friday noted that a few small pine trees were killed or defoliated in the dumping area, located in the former Gainesville Community area, resulted from a chlorine tank leak.

Wolverton explained the leaking tank, from NSTL's sewerage treatment lagoon, was temporarily stored in the secluded dump area until it could be repaired.

Hlass reported, "At the request of the Air Force, followed by the recommendation and approval of the Environmental Protection Agency, the Mississippi Air and Water Pollution Control Commission and the State Board of Health, materials which had been in contact with Agent Orange (stored at the Navy Seabee Center in Gulfport) at the time of its transfer to an incinerator ship (at the Port of Gulfport) and referred to as 'residues,' was landfilled at NSTL in 1977."

"Some 90 percent of the 'residue' consisted primarily of wooden support racks with no detectable signs of any contamination," the manager said.

"After the Mississippi Geological Survey advised officials at NSTL that the landfill site had a 13-foot deep impermeable layer of clay 34 feet below the surface, NSTL management approved disposal of this residue. The Air Force estimated the residue could contain a total of roughly one-millionth of one gram of hazardous chemicals," Hlass further explained.

Both officials said no hazard exists from the buried material based on January soil tests by Ecological Service, Inc. of Georgia and a resulting Environmental Protection Agency-Toxicant Analysis Center report listing "no detectable concentrations" of Agent Orange.

Hlass noted the newspaper reports also erroneously implied that several gallons of the dangerous herbicide were stored at the dump site.

"The drums buried here contain hoses, clothing, rags and soil which might have come in contact with the chemical—primarily from the Seabee base," he explained.

Wolverton said benite clay (an absorbent clay) and cleaning solutions used in the chemical cleanup process were also dumped at the site.

He noted that the "thousands" of barrels actually containing Agent Orange in Gulfport were melted down for metal at a smelting plant and none were dumped at NSTL.

Hlass said, "This frightens people when they read about a dangerous chemical leak and this was not the case here."

Regarding the damaged and killed pine trees in the dump area, Wolverton explained, "Agent Orange is a broad leaf defoliant which would not effect pine trees."

Both Hlass and Wolverton said they immediately inspected the dump area after learning of the newspaper articles and found no chemical odors, but did "see a lot of deer tracks."

Wolverton said NSTL has one other "garbage and lumber" dumping site also located in the Gainesville area.

"This garbage site is just about filled and right now we're seeking a permit to establish a new dump near the Mississippi Army Ammunition Plant," he reported.

In reference to the residue dump, Wolverton said two approximate 20-foot deep holes were dug to deposit the material at NSTL.

He explained the "imperable clay" found below the dump area is 13-foot thick red soil commonly found in local burrow pits.

"This is an ideal soil under a sewerage lagoon because it seals so well," Wolverton noted.

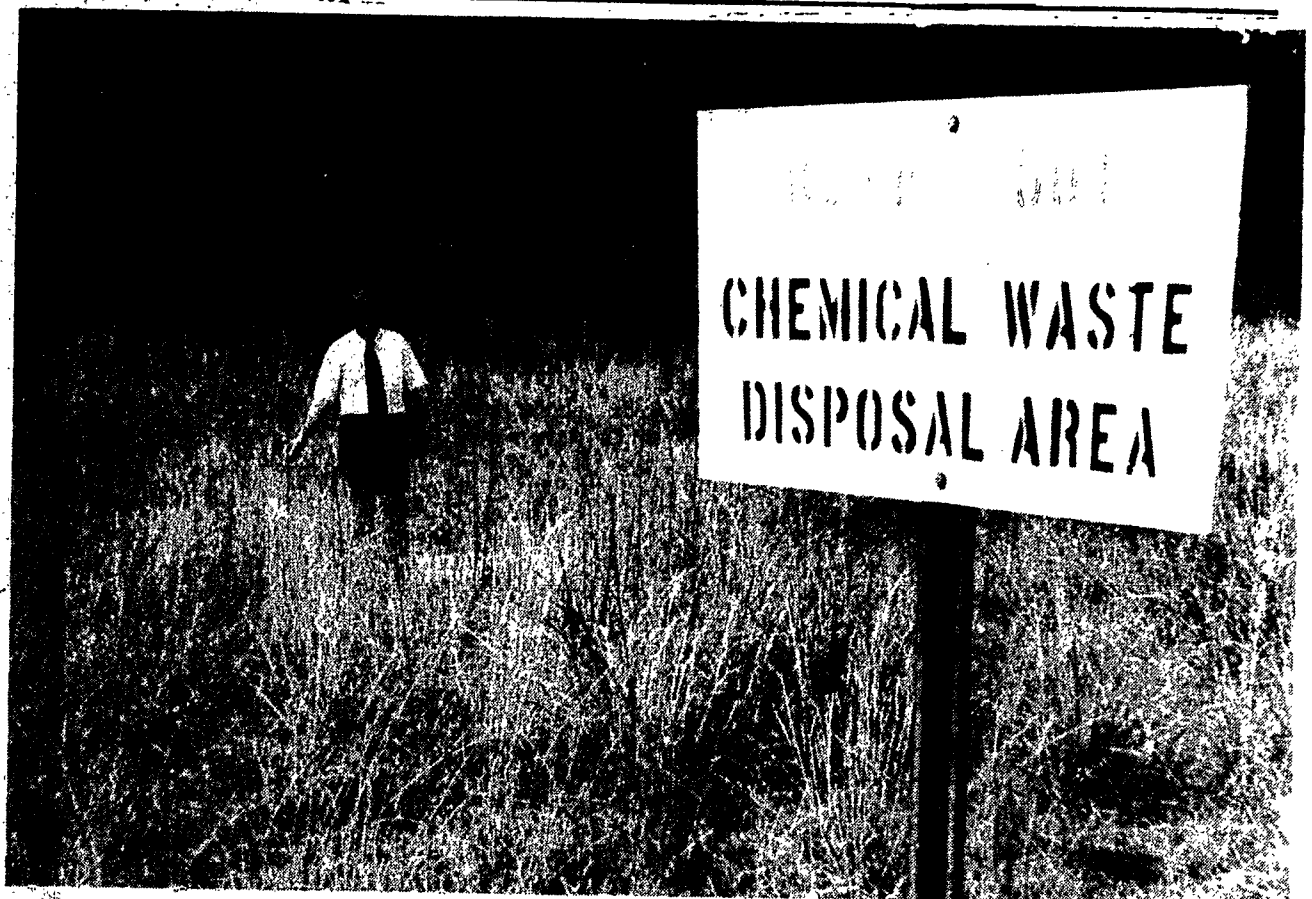

"Even if you dug down and found Agent Orange the chemical would have to penetrate a 13-foot clay layer. If it reached the first drinking water strata at 60 feet, then you would have trouble. But we foresee no problems with this and feel the area is safe," he explained.

The NSTL official said Agent Orange derivative is available in stores as the weed killer named 24-D, but the carcinogen Dioxin has been removed.

Wolverton said at one time some electrical transformers containing Poly-Chlorinated-Biphenyls, an oily chemical, were also stored at the dump site.

He reported PCB is a "persistent type of compound," but it's dangers to the environment have not yet been

Highway Department officials feel alcohol is Hwy. 603 culprit

By ELLIS CUEVAS

An on site check of State Hwy. 603 was made this week by Bobby Mosely, assistant traffic control and safety engineer, for the southern part of Mississippi.

Accompanying Mosely was Nollie McCordie, inspector, Mississippi Highway Patrol office, Gulfport and Hancock Sheriff Ronald Peterson.

The inspection was made at the request of the Hancock County Board of Supervisors because of the number of fatalities on the highway running through the county from north to south. Mosely said, "I could not see any highway geometrics that would have caused the accidents. The accidents apparently do not appear to be caused by the highway's design."

"There is a shoulder problem in certain weather conditions and it is a continuing problem on Hwy. 603. When it is wet and a vehicle runs off the road it causes a rut, especially in areas near mail boxes, curves and turn-offs," Mosely added.

The safety engineer continued, "I have contacted the maintenance department and they have assured me that as soon as it can be scheduled the shoulders will be re-worked."

The highway department did extensive shoulder work last year on 603 from I-10 to US-90.

Inspector McCordie stated, "People are speeding on Highway 603, and alcohol has been involved in almost all of the fatal wrecks."

"I have talked to the highway patrolmen assigned to the area and they are going to put in more time on

603. We are even going to set up road blocks at night and try our best to eliminate the accidents," McCordie allowed.

Mosely secured some average daily traffic counts for 603 and listing 1978 as 3,740 for south of I-10 and a drop to 3,410 for 1980. He did not have available any figures for 1981.

Mosely commented, "Another highway department does that survey and I am going to try and secure some more up-to-date data. The drop in travel is something being felt through the state due to the gas situation."

Peterson said, "I feel something has

Space Shuttle pilots to visit NSTL Friday

The crew of the first Space Shuttle flight, Cmdr. John Young and Pilot Robert Crippen, will visit the National Space Technology Laboratories in Hancock County Friday to offer shuttle engine development workers here a brief report of the recent flight and to thank them for their participation.

Mack Herring, NSTL public affairs officer, Friday stated, the visit will be among the first of what is expected to be a series of visits by the crew to principal shuttle locations around the country.

"Before arriving at NSTL, the astronauts will stop Thursday at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala. The center responsible for development of the shuttle engines, propellant tank and booster rockets, as well as for certain systems testing including main propulsion testing conducted at NSTL," Herring explained.

"Following a morning visit to NSTL, the crew is expected to travel to New Orleans to meet with workers at the Michoud Assembly Facility where Columbia's external liquid propellant tank was manufactured," he reported.

Herring noted that in gratitude astronauts traditionally visit developmental, construction, testing and flight control installations after space flights.

Legion commander backs classroom prayer, draft

By ELLIS CUEVAS

The national commander of the American Legion was honored at a banquet Wednesday night by the Bourgeois-Stieffel-Ray American Legion Post No. 77, Waveland.

Michael J. Kogutek, Legion national commander, was greeted by hundreds, including Post 77 and 139 members and Mississippi Legionnaires in the banquet which was preceded by a press conference.

Kogutek, a resident of Lackawanna, N.Y., was elected at the organization's 62nd annual national convention in Boston, Mass., Aug. 21, 1980.

At the press conference, Kogutek stated, "The World War II veteran is now 61 years old. He is at a time he will need hospital care. The American Legion advised the White House today that it will support President Reagan's bi-partisan 1982 budget proposal in the House of Representatives because it is the best for the country, even though it contains less funding in several areas of interest to its 2.7 million veteran members."

"The bi-partisan recommendation to be introduced in the House by Representatives Phil Graham (D. Tex.) and Delbert L. Latta (R. Ohio) satisfies a Legion mandate to increase defense outlays by at least 15 percent and restores $600 million to the Veterans Administration budget," Kogutek continued.

"The Legion will fight for the Vietnam Veterans to receive all benefits, according to the National Commander."

Kogutek stated, "I am for the return of school prayers. I am going to personally appear before Congress. I think it is important for the youth of our nation to seek divine guidance."

In answering a question about patriotism, Kogutek allowed, "I think we realize the importance of a strong defense, especially since the hostage situation. The American Legion supports a strong defense and feels we should be the number one nation in strength."

The National Commander made the following speech at the banquet:

"Department Commander Anderson, National Executive Committeeman Fred Ingellis, Alternate NECman

Gibson, distinguished guests, my fellow American Legionnaires, ladies and gentlemen, it is good to be visiting with you here in the Magnolia State, the home department of a loyal and valued member of my national leadership team for this year — Mississippi's own National Vice Commander Ralph M. Godwin."

Mississippi Power heads for court on rate denial

Mississippi Power Company, turned down by the state Public Service Commission on a request for a rehearing on recent rate hike proposals, will seek relief from the commission ruling in Chancery Court.

Victor J. Daniel Jr., chairman of Mississippi Power Company's Board of directors, said Friday his company will appeal the commission ruling in the Hinds County Chancery Court.

Daniel issued the following statement in connection with the decision to take the matter to court:

"The decision by the Mississippi Public Service Commission denying a request by Mississippi Power Company for a rehearing of its $39.3 million retail rate increase request leaves the company no choice but to appeal the matter to the Chancery Court of Hinds County.

"The Commission's decision to give the company only 28 percent of the amount originally requested last October is completely unsupported by the evidence presented during the public hearings.

"I hope that the customers realize that our decision to raise rates does not mean a lack of concern for their well-being. On the contrary, the future progress and financial welfare of our service area and its citizens is dependent on a reliable source of electric power to meet the energy needs of today and tomorrow.

"This power supply can only be provided if Mississippi Power Company has the financial strength to raise the money necessary to pay for facilities that are needed now and that will be required in the future.

"Contrary to the Commission's public statements, Mississippi Power Company has felt the adverse effects of double-digit inflation in every area of the business. For 55 years, the company has provided reliable electric service to its customers at rates which compare favorably with other parts of the country. It can continue to meet this responsibility only if it remains financially sound, a fact which the Commission has traditionally ignored.

"Time after time, the Commission has refused to recognize Mississippi Power Company's constitutional right to fair rate treatment. During the past decade, with inflation out of control, the Commission on three separate occasions refused to grant Mississippi Power Company one penny of rate relief. On each occasion, the company had to turn to the courts for the protection it should have been able to get from the commission.

"The courts of Mississippi, in every case, ruled that Mississippi Power Company's requests were reasonable, justified, and fully documented by the evidence presented before the Public Service Commission.

"Once again, Mississippi Power must appeal to the judicial system to preserve the financial stability of the company and to help ensure reliable electric service in the years ahead."

Mississippi Power Company, with headquarters in Gulfport, provides electric service to over 158,000 customers in 23 southeast Mississippi counties. The company is a member of the Southern electric system.

TREES RECOVERING—Dr. Bill Wolverton, NSTL environmental officer, Friday inspects pine trees apparently defoliated by gas from a leaking chlorine tank. Wolverton said an employee of a private contractor employed by the Environmental Protection Agency mistakenly thought the trees were damaged by herbicide Agent Orange 'residue' buried nearby. He noted that Agent Orange only effects broad leaved plants. (Staff photo by Wayne Ducomb Jr.)

NSTL LANDFILL—Dr. Bill Wolverton, NSTL environmental officer, Friday checks a notice posted in the National Space Technology Laboratories' landfill area. Wolverton said garbage and scrap lumber from the government facility is dumped at the landfill. He noted the dumping area will be closed soon and a permit another landfill near the Mississippi Army Ammunition Plant sought. (Staff photo by Wayne Ducomb Jr.)

to be done on 603. I am confident that the amount of traffic has increased since 1980. One of the big reasons is the opening of the new shopping center. I do not know the time of year, the surveys on traffic are taken, but I sure wish they would take one during the summer months."

A.A. (Dolph) Kellar, president of the Hancock County Board of Supervisors, stated Thursday, "I am concerned about the number of persons killed on Hwy. 603 and hope a solution can be found, soon."

The supervisors have made several requests to the Highway Department to four-lane 603, especially from Hwy. 43, and were turned down recently for a "lack of traffic."

Peterson stated one of the reasons he would like to see a traffic survey taken in the summer is because of the tremendous use of the Wave Pool at Buccaneer State Park, Waveland. Park officials report over 44,000 visitors at the pool last year.

Corrections

The article in Thursday's edition of The Sea Coast Echo concerning recommendations by an Educational Needs Assessment Committee to the Bay St. Louis Municipal Separate School District confuses two different organizations which give accreditation to schools in the system.

The elementary schools are accredited by the Mississippi Department of Education but are not accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

A varsity sports program in grades 1-6 and library deficiencies are the principal reasons North Bay and Waveland Elementary Schools have failed to qualify for SACS accreditation. State accreditation standards make no mention of varsity sports in lower grades and require less stringent standards for elementary libraries than the SACS standards.

Thursday's article also indicated points taken in minority reports were rejected by the majority of the committee, when in fact any committee member who wished to express opinions in addition to or in variance with the recommendations submitted in the Majority Report were allowed to do so under the school board's charge to its committee.

The Echo apologizes for these errors.

An article and photo in Thursday's edition of The Sea Coast Echo incorrectly listed the date as being Monday for a talent and variety show sponsored by the Methodist Fellowship Youth of the Main Street United Methodist Church.

Today, Sunday, is the correct day for the show which will begin at 7 p.m. at the Sy Rosenthal gym.

MEDICAL JOURNAL

According to a recent broadcast sponsored by the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center and The Prudential Insurance Company, exercise should be a major part of any weight-reduction program.

Dr. Barry Franklin of Sinai Hospital in Detroit says that, in addition to increasing heart and lung functions, exercise speeds up the loss of body fat without a reduction in muscle weight. Dr. Franklin recommends three exercise sessions a week, saying, "if you do a little bit of exercise, 20 to 30 minutes every day over a long period of time, you will tend to lose weight and lose it successfully."

According to Dr. Franklin, as little as half an hour of light daily exercise and turning down a sweet dessert can result in an overall reduction of about 500 calories a day. Over seven days, that adds up to 3,500 calories—or the caloric equivalent of one pound of fat.

"Perhaps the best exercises would include walking, jogging, swimming, stationary bicycle, cross country skiing," says Dr. Franklin. "These exercises or any activities in which the individual exercises large groups of muscles for a prolonged period of time are the most effective."

Dr. Franklin warns that "effortless exercise" devices are not effective. Although many people are intrigued by the idea of losing weight without dieting or exercising, he maintains it is impossible to reduce using such gimmicks. One such device, an abdominal belt vibrating machine, burns eleven calories during 15 minutes of use, requiring 307 fifteen-minute sessions to lose one pound of body fat.

We had a sneak preview Thursday night on several of the acts on tap Monday night for the "Buck or Two Beauty Revue."

The big event which starts at 8 p.m. at Sy Rosenthal Gym and is sponsored by the employees and friends of Hancock General Hospital.

So, if you want a basket full of laughs, and see some outstanding amateur talent, and help a worthy cause, come join the fun Monday night.

May is the month that kicks off the annual fair season in Hancock County.

The Annual St. Stanislaus Sideline Club's Fair will continue at 2 p.m. today.

If you are out driving around, we suggest you stop and enjoy some of the good food and fun.

The Miss Popularity contest winner will be named at 9 p.m.

We received word Friday from Tom Kane, service officer of American Legion Post No. 139 reporting that First Vice-Commander Pete Faucetta had surgery Wednesday.

Kane reports that Faucetta was in ICU as he had a triple bypass at Tulane's Medical Center, in New Orleans and everything was going fine.

We wish Faucetta a speedy recovery and understand he will be moving to Keesler Medical Center in about a week for final recovery.

While on the subject of American Legion, we are in complete agreement with the Legion's National Commander Michael J. Kogutek on his stand for prayer in schools and the restoration of the draft.

We are glad there are people and organizations who are going to fight for the return of prayer in schools throughout America.

As the Legion commander said, there is a need for a cross section of people in our military and one way to get that is through return of the draft.

It will be interesting to see how these ideas fare over the coming years.

Waveland and the American Legion should be proud to have sponsored Kogutek on his visit to Mississippi.

Keep up the good work, Commander Jack Doyle and fellow Legionnaires.

Law Day: A Time For An Agenda For Justice

By Harry M. Philo
President
Association of Trial Lawyers of America

On Law Day, USA, May 1, many bar associations and bar leaders participating in Law Day programs issue statements expressing near total satisfaction with our nation's current legal system and laws.

Such an approach to Law Day ill serves society, confusing a legal system with a system of justice. As trial lawyers who represent society's victims, we recognize Law tem of justice.

Day as the time to begin our agenda to improve remedies, reduce needless injuries and deaths and bring about a system of justice.

Our current legal system, in contrast to theoretical constitutional guarantees, does not yet produce justice and needs improvement, especially in light of the present unreasonable limitations on the rights of civil plaintiffs and criminally accused defendants, and the unreasonable restraints impeding proper representation of those victims by trial lawyers. Trial lawyers play a major role in improving our nation's legal system by seeking changes in our country's social architecture toward a comprehensive agenda for justice.

This agenda begins with world peace through law, supporting international legal agreements which limit arms and foster cooperation and progress among the nations of the world.

Justice requires the fullest access to the courts for all people, including the poor, minorities and handicaps, through elimination of unreasonable immunities and privileges and through expansion of remedies for victims and spouses. Access to the courts also includes eliminating oppressive statutes of limitations, expanding allowable attorney's fees and insuring criminal due process through independence of the bar and elimination of grand jury and sentencing abuses.

Trial lawyers concerned with this agenda insist on governmental responsibilities for an active role in industrial and product safety, in reasonable protection and benefits for the disabled, and in an adequate judiciary representative of society.

Justice further requires fairer trials with respect for juries as fact finders and with elimination of outdated defenses. As trial lawyers on the side of people, we recognize that the law is never settled until it is settled right. It is never right unless it is just. And it is never just until it serves society to the fullest.

Thus, on Law Day, USA, 1981, the trial bar omits the usual platitudes, but pledges to undertake the urgent agenda for a legal system which is a just system serving society to the fullest.

The Stennis report

Dear Friends:

At a hearing before the Senate Armed Services Committee recently, I told Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger that funding for defense program will come relatively easily this year.

There is perhaps a greater consensus in the Congress for increased defense spending now than in any other peace time in our history. It is essential that we use this mandate to really strengthen our overall defense position permanently.

We must think in terms of long-range requirements for military strength, rather than throwing money into a lot of programs which will have little or no lasting benefit.

Our military is equipped with the most sophisticated weaponry in the world. Our planes, ships, submarines, missiles, tanks and other weapons are the very best money can buy. However, there are some areas where special emphasis is needed, and all phases of military preparedness must be kept up to date.

The most obvious need is to build up our naval forces to meet the increased demand for U.S. naval presence in potential trouble spots in various parts of the world. Our fleet of 13 aircraft carriers is a vital part of our national defense. These are really floating airfields, capable of going to any part of the world to protect U.S. interests.

No other nation has anything to equal these aircraft carriers; four of which are nuclear-powered, capable of traveling thousands of miles without need to stop for refueling. I have long recognized the importance of these carriers to our national defense. Two years ago I was successful in adding an amendment to the Defense Appropriation Bill to build a new aircraft carrier.

Although the bill was vetoed, the Administration restudied the matter, and came back with the recommendation to build a new aircraft carrier. That carrier is now under construction and will greatly increase our defense capability when it is added to the force.

There is a real need for new guided missile cruisers, submarines, and destroyers to complement these aircraft carriers which are the real core of our Navy. I believe we will be successful this year in initiating a shipbuilding program which will greatly increase our overall strength at sea.

The area of greatest concern in our national defense is military manpower. We simply are not getting enough of the qualified people we need to man our sophisticated weaponry.

We have given the all-volunteer army concept a fair test, and it has failed. I am confident that we are going to have a return to some form of selective service which will provide our military services with individuals who are capable of taking the training and discipline necessary to keep our military at full strength.

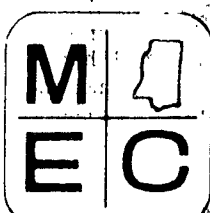

All of the sophisticated weaponry in the world will not guarantee our military strength. We must have strong-minded individuals in all branches of the military—those who can lead and those who can follow.

Unfortunately, money cannot solve this problem. Manpower already consumes half of the entire military budget. Throwing more money at the problem will not bring a solution.

I certainly do not advocate reinstatement of the draft system we had in the past. We can come up with a new system which will be fair to all.

Certainly, we are facing major challenges in national defense. I am confident that we are capable of meeting these challenges and acting during this Congress to institute long-range programs which will enhance and enable our military efforts in the years ahead.

I intend to do all I can to see that the issues of increasing naval strength and providing for future manpower needs in particular are dealt with effectively.

News

The Mississippi Economic Council has endorsed support for a federal income tax cut at all income tax levels as a necessary incentive for economic investment and growth.

The announcement was made by Council Chairman Lewis F. Mallory, Jr., a Starkville bank executive, at the conclusion of the Council's 32nd Annual Membership Meeting held in Jackson April 2.

"The Mississippi Economic Council is calling on all sectors of the state's economic community to support President Reagan's tax cut plan in addition to the administration's proposals to cut government spending," he said.

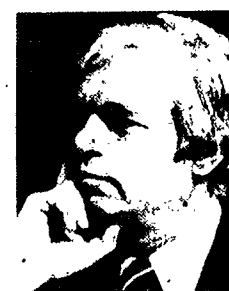

In making the statement, Mallory said that Americans at all levels are laboring under a heavy burden of taxation and that a tax cut would "provide an incentive for investment and growth in a stagnant economy. Tax burdens must be reduced if we are to reverse the pattern of declining productivity and personal savings rates."

The support for an income tax reduction was added to a list of actions released by the Council as necessary to reduce inflation, curb excessive government spending, and to eliminate inefficient and inappropriate government rules and regulations which translate into higher prices and, then, to more inflation.

Senator Thad Cochran

SPECIAL REPORT:

President's Challenge

Regulatory Reform

One of the essential elements of President Reagan's economic recovery program is regulatory reform. Much attention has been focused on the spending cuts that are a part of the program, but very little emphasis has been placed on this other equally important recommendation that the President has made.

During the last decade the expense and inflation that have been caused by unrestrained federal regulations have amounted to extraordinary burdens for taxpayers and consumers.

The cost of almost everything you buy is increased to some extent by a federal regulation, and every tax imposed by local and state government is higher because of some requirement imposed by the federal government in a rule, regulation or guideline.

Some experts estimate the annual cost of government regulation has climbed well above the $100 billion mark, and it may be as high as $130 billion a year.

Some federal agencies have been particularly overzealous in their exercise of authority. OSHA and EPA, the Occupational Safe-

This would help determine if it makes economic sense to issue the proposed regulation. In the past it seems that not enough attention has been paid to the economic consequences of federal government regulations. That's what President Reagan wants to change, and that is the object of this new bill that Senator Paul Laxalt and I will be pushing.

Another significant aspect of our regulatory reform bill is the provision that requires agencies to review major rules and regulations every ten years, to determine if they are still needed or should be withdrawn. A "major rule" is defined as one, or a series of such rules, which impose compliance costs of $100 million or more, which would substantially increase prices or costs for consumers and wage earners, and which would have widespread adverse effects on employment and productivity.

Our bill is called the Regulatory Reform Act of 1981. It may be the legislation which the administration will choose to implement this necessary part of its economic recovery program.

The legislation is essential in my opinion if we are to curb the growth and expense of federal regulation, and make the daily lives of our citizens less complicated and less costly.

It is my belief that we can protect the consumer public, the environment and safeguard other aspects of our society in a more rational manner than has been the custom the past few years.

With the support of the administration, and with a new mood on Capitol Hill and throughout our country, I am hopeful that our regulatory reform bill can be enacted into law this year.

The Bottom Line

We are having an identity crisis with our department store. Having always been the largest, when a couple of chains came in, we tried to meet them head on. As a result, profits are down and so is the quality of our merchandise. What Next?

Dear WN: The next step is up to you. You can continue as a cut-rate discounter, or try to re-establish your former position.

And, if it's any consolation, you aren't the only one in this condition. As a matter of fact you have some rather elite company.

Sears, the largest retailer in the world, faced a similar identity crisis a couple of years ago. Setting out to compete with both low-priced department stores and expensive specialty shops in the mid-1970s, the result was a blurred image, declining sales and a shrinking market share.

But, the bottom line was a decline in net profits of almost 20 per cent, and common stock falling to one-third of its 1972 price.

A new chairman pulled an about face. He said, "We are the premier distributor of durable goods and we intend to keep it that way... we are not a discounter, or an avant-garde department store, or a high fashion store."

In practice, what he means is fewer promotional sales, better quality merchandise, fewer brands of each item, and more in-store service. Promotional sales will be replaced by competitive everyday prices, he said.

The new chairman anticipated correctly a drop in overall sales.

But in analyzing the effects of the changes it was found that lost sales were practically all in promotional items, and most importantly, net profits were rising.

So Sears is back on their old track, and, apparently, rightly so.

Their ads now feature quality at everyday savings, rather than a deluge of discount tabloids with overlapping effective dates.

It takes courage to pull such an about face, but in this and most instances, where courage is tempered with knowledge and restrained by a unified marketing strategy, boldness pays off.

The initial effort and the carry-through will require an intensive advertising program. You must not only establish the new image; you also will have to maintain it.

So, don't feel as if you have gone too far down a one-way street—it's not too late to make a quick U-turn.

Knights' Notes

Brother Dennis (Doc) Ladrner of Biloxi Council No. 1244 distributed information on the history of the "Emblem of the Order" at the recent state convention.

For the edification of all Knights and interested readers, we thought it worth repeating.

"The Emblem of the Order dates from the Second Supreme meeting, May 12, 1883 when it was designed by James T. Mullem, who was then the first Supreme Knight. A quick glance at the emblem indicates a shield mounted on the cross of Malta.

"The shield is that associated with a medieval Knight. The cross of Malta is the representation in a traditionally artistic design of the cross of Christ through which all graces of redemption were procured for mankind.

"This then, represents the Catholic spirit of the Order.

"Mounted on the shield are three objects, a mace standing vertically, and crossed behind it, an anchor and a dagger or short sword. The mace from Roman days is symbolic of authority which must exist in any tightly-bonded and efficiently operating organization.

"The anchor is the mariner's symbol for Columbus, patron of the Order, while the short sword or dagger was the weapon of the Knight when engaged upon an errand of mercy.

"Thus, the shield expresses Catholic Knighthood in organized merciful action and with the letters K of C, it proclaims this specific form of activity.

"The red, white and blue in the background of the shield and foreground of the Cross of Malta are the colors of our country. As such red, is the symbol of courage, of activity and a full measure of devotion.

"Blue is the symbol of hope, of calm tranquility under God and of confidence in the protection of our country, established under God.

"White is the symbol of nobility of purpose, of purity of aim and of crucible-fried ideals to be carried out.

"But there is another symbolism of color in red, white and blue. This is the ecclesiastical symbolism in which red becomes the reflection of the drops of Christ's redemptive blood, shed upon Calvary and of the Martyr's blood shed in defense of the Faith.

FAITH, HOPE, CHARITY
"Red is then the symbol of Faith, of belief in Christ, in the Redemptive and in the mission of every man, to spread the knowledge and love of Jesus Christ.

"White is the color of the Eucharistic Host, pledge of God's Eucharistic presence among men, of the infinite love God had for man and of the overwhelming affection which the God-man had for each individual.

"White is then the symbol of Christ-like Charity.

"Blue is the color of Our Lady's mantle in which she draped her beloved Son, through whom salvation came to a sinful world.

"Blue is then the symbol of hope."

Thursday's Knight's Notes stated that the Pere Le Duc Council received a trophy for having 125 percent above its quota for membership when in reality it should have read 1,125 percent above their quota.

George Fero, the membership chairman, said he had to call the Supreme Knights of Columbus to check on the number. He was sure that they had made a mistake, but they didn't.

Grand Knight Bob Hubbard has received congratulations in a letter from State Deputy Rodney Sandoz of Long Beach on the outstanding membership achievement.

"On behalf of the officers and members of the State Council, I extend congratulations on having achieved the highest percentage net increase in membership of any council in the state for the period July 1, 1980 through April 1, 1981," Sandoz said.

"Your council's achievement of 1,125 percent of quota is remarkable. It shows what can be done when a few dedicated Knights decide to move a council forward," the state deputy continued.

"The Bay St. Louis council has always been special to me and it is really heart-warming to see her once again taking a leadership position in the state," Sandoz added.

There will be a meeting on Monday at 8 p.m. at the hall. Please ignore the newsletter that stated the meeting would be held on Monday, May 11.

Pulpit

Points

BY DR. L.S. WALKER

I HAVE FOUND LIFE ITSELF profoundly interesting. One thing which has contributed to such interest in my life has been meeting and knowing people.

It has been my pleasure to have traveled over much of this great land we call America; as well as into many other areas of the world in the 67 years of my life.

Most of us in an average lifetime meet many people along life's winding pathway.

Some we may meet by chance. Others are perhaps introduced to us by a mutual friend. There is the usual warm handclasp with an expression of good pleasure. Some of these acquaintances we may never see again; others may come to mean much to us in life.

It was my eternal good fortune one Sunday evening at the close of a simple church worship service to become acquainted with a different kind of Person, in a much different kind of way.

This Man was introduced to me by the Holy Spirit through the hearing of the Word of God. This has remained, as it was that memorable evening, the most thrilling, endearing and enduring experience of my entire life!

No, there was not the usual personal handshake. But He was there; He was real; and His Presence was felt. He brought to my soul salvation, peace and joy! I was moved with great emotion; but more than that, I was moved with deep and abiding conviction. Words fail to describe the joy that filled my heart!

The sweet Holy Spirit, as I have come to realize, reminded me that there was much more for me to learn about this Man.

I have found myself eager to know more about Him. I was profoundly impressed by the Holy Spirit, our Comforter-Companion "who stands along side of us" to "search the scriptures," for therein would I become better acquainted with this great Personality.

In searching the scriptures I learned of His love, sorrow, suffering, and of His supreme sacrifice made for me and all men at Calvary.

As a matter of fact, the mystery of life itself, and all the wonders of the natural creation about me, was a thrilling testimony to the glorious work and power of this Man.

But it was the Bible, God's inspired Word, that really informed me: as to exactly who He is!

I was simply amazed at His compassion toward men! He is God's Man and man's God! This Man, to be sure, was quite different from any other I had ever met.

There is a reason: He is Jesus Christ, the Son of God, our Saviour and Lord! And, you know what: Life has never been quite the same with me since I met Him!

In searching the scriptures, I read of so many who met Him, and were never the same again. The same can be said of all our contemporaries who have come to know Him as their Saviour!

The poor adulterous woman who met Him at Jacob's Well in ancient Samaria hastened to the nearby village to tell others:

"Come see a man," she cried, "which hath told me all things that ever I did: is not this the Christ?" Because of her testimony many came and said: "We have heard him ourselves, and know that this is indeed the Christ, The Saviour of the world!" —John 4:29-42.

There's an Answer!

Don't bail them out

Q. I do not agree with your advice to the woman who was being called "an old woman" by office co-workers while being asked to do their work for them. You told her to maintain her good humor and help her younger associates. These girls will never learn their job if they are constantly bailed out.

It was once assumed that one who applied for a job knew how to do simple arithmetic, could read and write, had ambition, courtesy and kindness. And it used to be that an employee who was lazy, was unwilling to learn, didn't know what soap and water was for, would be fired.

Nowadays "no good" people don't worry even if they are fired. They go on welfare and we who are worthy and hard working pay taxes to keep these characters. Right?

A. Thank you for your opinion. You may be "right" in some of your facts, but a bitter attitude accomplishes nothing.

Our City is deep into a continuing pattern of growth. The incoming administration will be confronted with awesome responsibilities. To meet this challenge, a spirit of harmony and cooperation must prevail between the two branches of city government. Constructive criticism will be helpful. Unjust criticism, petty bickering or constant "nit-picking" will not be conducive to the best interest of our citizens. $8,200 a day, every day.

It takes about $8,200 a day to run Bay St. Louis. Is this money wasted or spent wisely? That depends on how well the mayor runs this city. The mayor makes the routine decisions that determine how streets, drainage and utilities are maintained, how the police and fire departments operate and how the other city departments are run. In short, the mayor is the boss of the city's daily business.

To spend our local money wisely, we need good management in the mayor's office. We need a new mayor.

LISA CHURCH, A 10TH GRADE STUDENT, HANGS SOME OF HER PORTRAIT SKETCHES.

Students in art classes at Our Lady's Academy recently exhibited their works at City-County Library and St. Stanislaus High School, both in Bay St. Louis.

A beginner's art class at the Academy includes 17 seventh grade students and five 10th grade students.

The beginners are exposed to many types of media during the school year. Their projects show explorations into enlargement of animal pictures and foods executed earlier in the year.

These students are currently studying the face. Portraits include sketches from magazines, and drawings of their classmates.

Students in the seventh grade class are Maria Alcala, Caytee Carter, Michelle Chiniche, Dawn Cox, Laura Daman, Lisa Holland, Cheryl Jones, Darlene Kimball, Lisa Logan, Dana Martin, Dana Mauffray, J'lene Noto, Michelle Pleasala, Terese Richardson, Almee Schmidt, Jodi Triche and Cynthia Willett.

Students in the 10th grade class are Angel Ambrose, Lisa Church, Gina Randolph, Julie Reho and Jeanne Starling.

An advanced art class follows a most 'in depth' program. These students range from 10th through 12th grades.

They have worked with oil paints and use of the etching press for their Christmas cards. The students are presently exploring pastels and charcoal and will study water colors later in the year.

Students in this class are Ethel Griffith, Michelle Thibodeaux, Diane Casserta, Krissy Koch, Maureen Stakelum, Penny Bourgeois, Wendy Erichsen, Connie Sauer, Marilyn Skladzien, and Sharon Stakelum.

The graduates are very accomplished young artists who have shown their ability to follow form and structure, yet are able to work very creatively.

Intermediate art class program includes sketching in pencil and charcoal and pastels and water color.

The class makes linoleum block prints for their Christmas project.

The class of 11 girls recently printed 400 cards for the families of the Bay Catholic School System for Christmas. Before the year is over they will explore batik and simple loom weaving.

Students in intermediate art are Maria Becker, Maria Benvenuti, Pennie Boudin, Kristen Bowles, Kathy Colson, Connally Compretta, Pam deBen, Connie Moran, Keri Stockstill, Jackie Sotak and Monique Thibodeaux.

Court reporting added to USM curriculum

The Business Education Department at the University of Southern Mississippi is offering an emphasis in court reporting beginning in the fall of 1981.

The new emphasis in court reporting is being established because of the interest individuals have been showing in such a program and because of the need for well-trained court reporters.

The demand for court reporters in Mississippi is especially greater than ever because of the discovery laws allowing attorneys to admit depositions into evidence in courtrooms.

Career opportunities are excellent. Average starting salaries are $16,800 to $18,900, and experienced reporters may earn from $30,000 to $40,000 annually.

Students may elect from a two-year program leading to a certificate, or a more comprehensive four-year program leading to a bachelor of science degree in business education.

For more information on this program contact Mrs. Miriam Borthwick, Department of Business Education, University of Southern Mississippi, Southern Station Box 9203, Hattiesburg, Ms. 39401, (601) 266-7305 or 266-7261.

Spanish land grants were impetus to early settlement in Hancock

By S. GRADY THIGPEN

During their occupation from 1779 to 1810, the Spanish authorities were eager to get settlers located in the big, almost uninhabited area known as West Florida, of which Pearl River and Hancock Counties and St. Tammany Parish were a part. For this reason they were most liberal in their granting of land to settlers, letting them have the land at no cost if they would meet certain conditions.

To hold their land grants, settlers were required to live on and to cultivate a reasonable amount of the land for not less than three years. After the three years were up settlers were entitled, at no cost, to Spanish land patents or deeds. As a result of this generous policy of the Spanish government, many Anglo-Saxons from Southern United States and from the Atlantic seaboard settled along and back from Pearl River in Spanish territory.

The size of a land grant to a settler depended upon the size of the family, the number of slaves owned, and the number of cattle and other livestock brought in. After the first three years were up, if the settler had complied with Spanish law and regulations, he could apply for more land for a number of reasons. Among them, an increase in the size of the family or in the number of slaves, or in the number of cattle and other livestock owned.

Along about 1790, due to pressure from the leaders of the Catholic church, the Spanish government began to require from settlers an oath of allegiance to the Catholic church. Practically all of the settlers who were coming into this area were protestants. Most of the later arrivals refused to become members of the Catholic faith and so could not qualify for land grants.

As a result, these settlers went on up Pearl River, north of the 31st degree of latitude, the line between the United States and Spain, and settled in what is now Marion County, Mississippi. Emigration into what is now Pearl and Hancock counties almost ceased.

The Spanish authorities were eager for settlers in their new territory. After a short time, with no new settlers moving in, they went back to their old policy of admitting all who came without religious restriction.

"When" the religious restriction was removed the tide of emigration began again and steadily increased until 1811, when the United States occupied West Florida.

During the Spanish occupation, settlers were offered attractive prices for pine tar for "His Catholic Majesty's Ships." His Majesty, the King of Spain, required that all cypress trees that could be used for spars and masts for ships be set aside for "His Majesty's Ships."

The burning of tar and the hewing out of tall cypress trees for ship's masts were the first commercial uses of forest products in what are now Pearl River and Hancock counties, and St. Tammany and Washington parishes. Later on, pine trees of the right size and length were also reserved for masts of ships.

Apart from cattle raising and farming, the production of tar became the main occupation of the settlers along Pearl River for many miles. Some time before 1800, the date uncertain, a good sized tract of pine timber north of what is now Cybur was leveled by a hurricane.

Some of the finest timber that ever grew was blown down. In the time, the sap part of the trees rotted off, leaving the fat pitch pine heart of the trees "ripe" for the tar kilns.

A green pine tree is not suitable for the production of tar. When blown down or deadened, the heart of the pine tree goes through a process of several years of "ripening" or changing into a wood rich in pine tar products.

This wood was then placed in stacks in the woods, called kilns, for burning, with the tar flowing out into containers placed properly around the kilns.

Another product of this process was charcoal, which later on New Orleans and other population centers bought.

H.V. Henley, now deceased, who gave me most of the information for this dissertation on the old days, said, "My grandfather and another man, according to an old document, were burning tar before 1850 when sawmills and cotton gins were erected at Gainesville and Pearlinton, and before there was a ready market for another forest products. To show the importance and volume of the tar business, a man named Whitchard, who has descendants in this area now, brought a crew of men up on Black Creek, near Cybur, to make barrels for the shipping of tar."

The production of tar from the great hurricane area near Cybur became such a big business that settlers cut a float road, suitable for flat boats on Black Creek. The flat boats would be loaded with products and poled down stream to Pearl River.

Another important forest product was cypress shakes, used for roofing. Cypress roof boards, called shakes in the old days, were split out and then smoothed with drawing knives.

Many of the finest old homes in New Orleans in the old days were covered with these Cypress shakes, which had been shipped down Pearl River on flat boats and then loaded on schooners bound for New Orleans.

Also shipped down river on the old time flat boats were oak staves, barrel heads and hoops for making barrels. Baskets made of these oak slats were filled with produce and sold, after they had been unloaded, to the sawmills in the river towns. In the old days there were buyers for all these products of Gainesville and Pearlinton.

After the steamboats began to ply up and down the river, these products were poled on flat boats to landings on the river and there transferred to the steamboats. The term, poled, means that the flat boat was controlled by poles in the hands of the crew as it floated down stream.

Settlers began to raise much cotton along Pearl River as far up as Jackson. Growers along the river would load their cotton on flat boats and carry it to the gins of Gainesville and Pearlinton.

After gins were built up river, the bales of cotton would be hauled on flat boats to the cotton buyers at the lower river towns. After the steamboats began to operate, most all cotton was hauled on them.

Old men now living remember seeing steamboats going down the river loaded with bales of cotton. Before the railway came through in 1884, the river was the only means of transporting cotton cattle, etc. to the big markets.

In shipping down the river, lightweight, or low density, logs would be selected for the flat boats. Enough of these logs would be bound together to carry a big load. As it would take weeks to make the trip to market, a kitchen and living quarters would be erected on the flat boat so that the men would have a place to live on the trip.

About the only evidences left of this era in the history of this section are old names. Tar Landing on Pearl River, southwest of Cybur, got its name from the fact that much tar was stored there to be shipped down river.

Flat Landing, nearby, was another place for river shipment. It is interesting to note that army records show that part of the equipment for Jackson's Army, on its way to New Orleans, was shipped down river on flat boats from Tar Landing.

The Black Creek Float road was ideal for such traffic. It was of easy access by roads over which tar and other products could be hauled. It had low banks. Logs destined for the mills down river were hauled to the banks of Black Creek and bound there onto rafts to await the rise in the river, which would back the water up sufficiently to float the logs.

When the water rose high enough, the logs would be turned loose to start on their way to the mills.

You are not as young as you once were if you remember when:

Manieri's Restaurant was located on the Beach at the head of Washington Street. It was a popular meeting place in the early 1900's. Dad Manieri's son, Russell, was nationally known prizefighter. Christ Episcopal Church was located on North Beach at Carroll Avenue.

The Broadview Restaurant located on Highway 90 was owned by Joe and Louise Wyner.

Darwood on the Jeanran had artistic plantings of shrubs and flowers attracting tourists from far away places.

Frank P. Corso, Inc. was distributor of El Tressas

Cigars.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Scharff came down from Memphis, Tenn. to start a grocery store.

Paul E. (Pete) Porter came down from Pennsylvania with the American Bridge Company to help construct the Rigolets Railroad Bridge.

Kern's had a Five and Ten Cent Store on Main Street. Western Union Telegrams were delivered to your door.

You told Central what phone number you wanted. Maybe you just named the person with whom you wished to speak, like "Hello, Central, please connect me with Ben Hille."

The Beach Drug Store was located "on the front and across from the Hancock Bank". Believe they sold Rexall Remedies and maybe Lydia E. Pinkham's vegetable compound.

George diBenedetto operated a TV & Appliance business at 123 South Beach.

Dub Scarborough was an agent for Browns Velvet — and married Yvonne Strong. You could buy a cup of coffee for a nickel.

Your telephone number had a HO prefix. You caught the commuter to go to New Orleans.

Why are utility bills so high?

Utility bills shouldn't go up so fast. Fixing gas leaks can reduce the $75,000 to $100,000 worth of gas lost each year. Bay St. Louis has federal money for new gas lines in one part of town; but what about the rest of the city? We need to do some repair work on our own.

Materials and repair contractors cost the utility system $243,000 last year. Much of this can be saved by repairing sewer and water breaks as soon as they happen, and by avoiding "blank check" repair contracts that are wide open for abuse.

To save money we need better maintenance practices. We need a new mayor.

Fire Ants Are Burning The South

An aggressive insect pest, the imported fire ant, is "burning" its way from the Gulf coast north and westward through the Southern United States.

The invasion of this pest is believed to have started about 1920, when it arrived from South America aboard shipping vessels. Since then, imported fire ants have advanced over nine southern states and currently infest more than 230 million acres.

The imported fire ant derives its name from its painful, burning bite. Unlike the relatively harmless native fire ant, the imported species is fiercely aggressive. When disturbed, these ants swarm over children, adults, pets, and farm animals, inflicting numerous burning and potentially infectious bites.

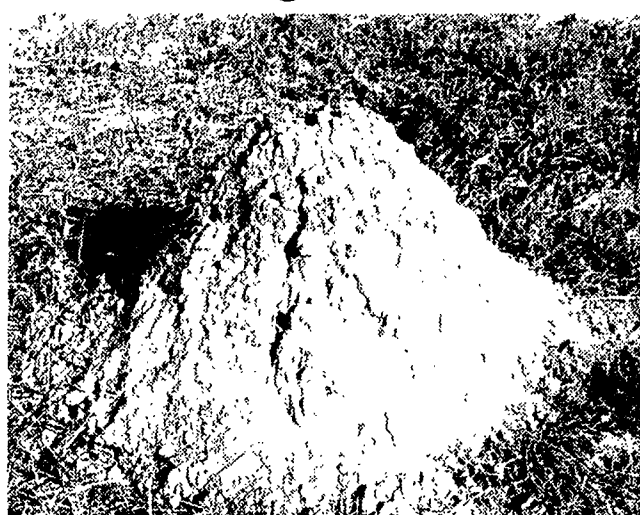

Headquarters for each colony of imported fire ants is an earthen mound built by the worker ants. The mounds can be up to 2 feet high and 2 feet wide. They are found in lawns, flower gardens, playgrounds, golf courses, parks, and farmland.

As the inhabitants of each mound spread throughout their territory foraging for food, they pose a danger to children and adults playing or working in the area.

Farmers, too, are plagued by these pests. The mounds deface valuable farmland and pastures and damage machinery. The fire ants bite farm workers, causing much lost time during the growing and harvesting seasons, and attack livestock in the fields.

Imported fire ants cannot survive temperatures below 10 degrees Fahrenheit. This has stopped their progress to the north. They continue to spread west, however. Many scientists fear that they will continue to advance across the Southwest to the Pacific shore and spread along the coastline.

A colony of imported fire ants, like any other ant colony, contains a queen ant and thousands of worker ants. The queen's main function is to lay eggs, which develop into more workers. The workers build and maintain the mound and gather food for the colony.

After the colony's first year, the queen may lay eggs which develop into winged males and females. At the proper stage of development, these winged ants take off from their home nest and "mate" in the air. The female then returns to earth, begins laying eggs, and establishes a new mound.

Since 1978, there has been no pesticide on the market which will effectively control imported fire ants without adverse effects to the environment. Working closely with federal and state government agencies, research scientists at American Cyanamid Company have developed and introduced a new product which has been conditionally registered by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) for the control of imported fire ants.

The product, Amdro fire ant insecticide, is a bait formulation designed to be highly attractive to imported fire ants. It is spread around the mound, where worker ants gather the bait and carry it back to all members of the colony. Eventually it reaches and kills the queen, usually within 24 weeks. With the death of the queen, the colony is doomed, since no new eggs are being produced. In 4-8 weeks the remaining ants will die, marking the end of the mound.

The new product is non-toxic to birds, mammals, and other wildlife and is rapidly biodegradable, overcoming many of the environmental concerns which characterized previously available fire ant insecticides. It is, however, harmful to fish, and should not be used near streams and ponds. Like all other chemical pest control products, it must be used according to label directions.

During the summer of 1980 some 100,000 acres were treated with the new product under cooperative testing programs. The success of these programs and introduction of the new control product offers new hope to residents throughout the areas infested by this pest.

Local county extension agents, state extension services, experiment stations, state Departments of Agriculture, and public health authorities can provide more information to help homeowners, gardeners, and farmers control these vicious pests.

DRUG QUIZ

by Curt Scarborough, Ph.D.

QUESTION Since the Controlled Substances Act of 1970, which cut back by 90 percent the manufacture of amphetamines (uppers, stimulants), it is no longer possible to divert large amounts of legitimate supplies to be illegally dealt on the streets. Consequently, much of what is sold on the street is fake. What percentage of street amphetamines are fake?

- a) 35%
- b) 56%
- c) 75%
- d) 95%

ANSWER In a survey of street labs which analyze street drugs at the request of users, parents, and police, Dr. John P. Morgan, associate professor of pharmacology and medicine at Mt. Sinai School of Medicine in New York City, found that although the "fakes" still look like the old familiar "black beauties," "white crosses," and "pink hearts," most of them contain "equal stimulants" such as caffeine, ephedrine, and pseudoephedrine. In 1978, the percentage of fakes was 95 percent, and Dr. Morgan believes it is even higher now.

Correct answer - d

America. "Growing numbers of 13 to 15 year old girls are sexually active, chemically active, and come from alienated, chaotic homes," she said. This accounts for the increasing number of runaway girls each year. How many of the estimated million runaways each year are girls?

- a) One-fourth
- b) One-half
- c) One-tenth
- d) One-third

Answer - More than half of the runaways each year are girls, mostly 11 to 14 years old. Ms. Thomas also pointed out that arrest rates for girls are rising twice as fast as those for boys and that substance abuse is a significant factor.

Correct answer - b.

YOU AND YOUR PET

By Robert L. Stear, D.V.M.
Manager of Veterinary Services
Norden Laboratories

Many Mississippi families own a cat, a dog or both.

These pets can cause problems if they are infested with ticks and fleas.

"Problems are greater in warmer months, but may occur in cooler months, too," says Dr. Pat Harris, area pest management specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

"It's easier to control pests on your pets and in their pens than it is to control them after an infestation develops inside your home."

Sanitation can be the key to controlling fleas, ticks and mange mites. Keep sleeping quarters of pets clean and change bedding periodically. If you see fleas in the house, vacuum the floor, baseboards and furniture frequently and destroy the contents of the vacuum cleaner bag immediately after use.

"Dense vegetation should be kept cut back around the house to help reduce tick infestations," Dr. Harris says. "If your pets don't respond to treatment within three weeks, consult your veterinarian."

Flea collars may be used to control fleas on cats and dogs. Don't use dog collars on cats, and don't use other insecticides on cats while they are wearing collars.

Make sure the collar fits properly so the pet can't chew on it. Remove the collar if the pet shows signs of irritation or adverse reaction.

Don't use collars on sick or weak pets, he adds. Children should not be allowed to play with collars.

Insecticide dusts are available to control ticks, fleas and lice on cats.

Tick collars are available to control fleas and ticks on dogs. Also, pressurized sprays, sponge baths, dips, sprays or dusts are available to control fleas, ticks and lice on dogs.

Mange mites may be controlled with pressurized sprays on cats and dogs. Mites on dogs may be controlled with aerosols, ready-to-use baths, dips, sprays or sponge baths.

Many commercially available pet insecticides will control pests that attack pets. When using these insecticides, always read and follow label directions, he adds. For further information, contact your MCES county office and ask for publication 906, "Parasite Control for Cats and Dogs."

HOME LOANS

SOLAR FACTS

by Robert E. Lewis

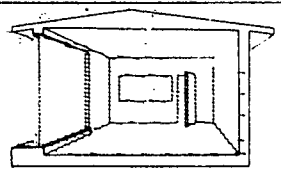

DIRECT-GAIN PASSIVE HEATING

As mentioned in previous columns, there are three basic types of passive solar heating systems—direct-gain, indirect-gain and isolated-gain. This week's column focuses on direct gain systems, the simplest of the three concepts and among the most popular.

Like all other passive heating designs, direct-gain systems do not require any solar roof collectors or mechanical systems in order to operate. Instead, the building itself is designed to collect, store and distribute the sun's heat naturally.

Direct-gain heating systems are so named because solar radiation enters the building directly to provide heat to the immediate interior area. As the sun's rays enter through the south-facing glass, it heats the building's interior surfaces and contents. To absorb and store as much of this heat as possible, thick masonry interior walls and/or floors are used. These heat-storing materials—known as the system's thermal mass—hold the heat for slow release at night or whenever outside temperatures drop.

DIRECT-GAIN SYSTEM

For consumers, one of the greatest advantages of the direct-gain system (in addition to fuel savings) is its simplicity. In essence, only two things are needed: a south-facing glass area, and a thermal mass usually in the form of masonry walls and floors.

The southern exposure of the glass area maximizes the amount of solar energy entering the building in the winter, when heat is needed, and minimizes it in the summer. Since direct-gain systems operate whenever the sun is up, sun screens, shades and/or movable insulation are used to prevent overheating during the day. These same devices also help during the evening to prevent heat loss.

The use of masonry for the interior walls and floors not only provides absorption and storage of heat for future release, it also helps alleviate major fluctuations in temperature. In fact, most direct-gain experts recommend that at least one half, and up to two-thirds of the total surface area exposed to the south-facing glass, be constructed of masonry or other heat-absorbing materials. This provides optimal heating efficiency and comfort.

Because direct-gain systems operate on cloudy as well as clear days, they are suitable for use in virtually all areas of the country. Current estimates suggest that a well-designed direct-gain system can provide up to 80 percent of a home's heating needs. In warm and sunny climates such as Los Angeles, the percentage may be higher. In colder and cloudy areas, such as Seattle or certain parts of Wisconsin, a direct-gain system often can provide between 40 and 60 percent of a home's needs.

To make up the difference, back-up or auxiliary heating systems are recommended with the installation of a direct-gain system. The type of back-up system selected usually depends on homeowner preference and the amount of additional heat required.

To learn more about direct-gain heating systems, including how they can be adapted for use in existing homes, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to:

The Spinal Column

BY
WILLIAM L. POWELL, D.C.

Low Back and Hip Pain

Many times throughout the year, a patient with low back or leg pain comes to the office with a diagnosis of "strain" or "sprain" already made. Generally heat, braces, medications and traction have already been applied without giving any lasting relief. Our continued success in treating these cases stems mainly from our careful evaluation of any pelvic misalignments and of course, proper treatment (once the true problem is identified.)

Falls and accidents can easily influence the pelvis and often if symptoms arise following an accident, proper examination and treatment may well avoid present and future problems.

County Agent's Notes

by John Smith

WOOL SALE

The 1981 Wool Sale Delivery Date has been set for May 25, 1981, at Wiggins.

Wool will be accepted beginning at 7 a.m., south of the ICG Depot, at some location as in part years. I suggest you start clipping your sheep now so you will be ready for delivery.

Keep your wool dry, clean, using clean feed bags, large wool bags or white cotton bags. Pack as much wool of one kind in a bag as possible. Fewer and larger bags will require less space and less handling.

Clearly identify each bag by printing your name, address and zip code on a tag and attach it to each bag. This will avoid mix-ups and aid in record keeping. Store in dry place until market time and keep wool protected enroute to market.

SOYBEAN MEETING

There will be a Soybean Meeting, Tuesday evening, May 5 at the Farm Bureau

Office at Kiln, starting at 2 p.m.

Dr. Wayne Houston, Extension weed specialist from Mississippi State University, and Dr. Pat Harris, area Extension pest management specialist, will be on program to outline a good weed and insect control program.

PLANT ON TIME

Soybean growers should try to plant most of their crops at the most favorable time. This means planting from May 1-30 in the area north of US Hwy. 84 and May 15 to June 10 south of Hwy. 84.

Planting in these periods gives beans the best chance to reach maximum plant size before they begin to bloom. This means better chances of highest yields.

Planting earlier than these dates may reduce yields, but probably not as much as planting later than the best period.

CATFISH FARMERS

There will be a meeting for catfish farmers and prospective catfish farmers at the Farm Bureau Building, 1300 Highway 49 North, Hattiesburg, on Thursday evening, May 7 at 7 p.m.

Dr. T.L. Wellborn, leader, Extension Wildlife and Fisheries Department, will discuss the do's and don't's of catfish farming which is particularly important for people who are thinking about getting into this new industry or who are just beginning to start catfish farming.

In addition to this, Lester Myers and Buddy Stovall, managers of the two farmer-owned catfish feed mills in Mississippi, will discuss the catfish feed situation as it now exists.

Catfish feed appears to be in short supply this year due to the large increase in acreage which has occurred recently. The discussion of the feed situation and feeding programs for catfish should be of interest to all catfish farmers.

Turner Arant, immediate past president of Catfish Farmers of America and a catfish farmer in Sunflower County, Mississippi will discuss the outlook for catfish farming for the future.

We urge that all catfish farmers and prospective catfish farmers make an effort to attend this very informative meeting.

ANSEL ADAMS: PHOTOGRAPHER—As famed photographer Ansel Adams strides through a Yosemite meadow with the mountains he photographed so often in the background, a quote from a letter written to him by Alfred Stieglitz in 1938 sums up the message of the film "Ansel Adams: Photographer": "It's good for me to know that there is an Ansel Adams loose somewhere in this world of ours." "Ansel Adams: Photographer" presents a film portrait of that artist. The film can be seen at 8 p.m., Wednesday, May 13, on the Mississippi ETV Network. Adams is well-known for his extensive photography of the Sierra Mountains and Yosemite Valley, pictured here.

SEQUEL TO EMBARGO

The Russian grain embargo has come and gone — almost — over the past fifteen months, and its effects were mostly bad regardless of where one sat.

For the Russians, it was bad, or at least inconvenient. They had to drive around to the back door and get their grain from another handler in a plain, no-name brown bag. It was more expensive that way too, but they out it.

For then President Jimmy Carter, it smeared his image with the nation's farmers and the piles of discounted grain constituted no small obstacle to his second bid for the White House.

For President Reagan, it was a sorry inheritance and an honor test.

For the American farmers, it was an account unrecivable to the tune of somewhere between $3-$13 billion — depending on who did the figuring.

Mississippi farmers are glad it is nearly gone, although soybean prices are not expected to bounce right back which is part of the economic tragedy of that blip on our trade heartbeat.

Hugh M. Arant, president of the Mississippi Farm Bureau Federation, regrets that President Reagan deferred for three months on a campaign promise to end the embargo. He reports that the nation's farmers opposed the embargo from the outset and repeatedly called on Presidents Carter and Reagan to call the whole thing off and cease and desist from using agricultural production as a pawn in international diplomacy.

"Lifting of the embargo does not mean an immediate rise in soybean or wheat prices for farmers," Arant cautioned, "even though grain prices are expected to be strengthened in due time as new trade agreements are reached between the United States and Russia."

"By fall wheat producers, particularly in the mid-South, should benefit by as much as from fifty cents to a dollar per bushel as the disruption in the orderly marketing system is overcome. What we have now," Arant explained, "is full storage facilities at grain terminals. By the time new crop wheat is harvested we expect enough soybeans will have been moved out of the elevators to accommodate enough wheat that farmers may again hold it in storage beyond the harvest seasonal glut on facilities. This orderly marketing, as we call it, can easily enable wheat farmers to increase their sales price up to a dollar per bushel."

"Too, Mississippi soybean producers will enjoy a shipping price advantage of some 15 cents a bushel because of their close proximity to the Gulf Coast shipping lanes," the farm organization head said. He added that the farm group had supported the development of the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway from the outset because of the approximately 15 cents a bushel savings in waterway transportation of grain crops.

"Corn is not affected much either way by the boycott since the United States does not have surplus supplies to offer in the international market," Arant said.

Meanwhile, there appears to be a genuine togetherness on the part of the major farm organizations as they seek Congressional action on a new farm bill that will prevent future single industry boycotts from being imposed by the government.

Arant said farmers will support a complete boycott shared in by the whole spectrum of commerce in any future national or world crisis. "We said that in our policy statements 15 months ago and we still hold to that position. Just don't expect agriculture again to be forced to carry the whole load!" he concluded.

USE OR LOSE RAILS

In a switch of emphasis from lose them to use them, delta shippers, farmers, Illinois Central Gulf officials, and others with an interest in ICG's Valley Line through the Mississippi delta country met in Stoneville last week in meeting characterized by an emphasis on "use 'em".

Gerald Stuckey, ICG official in charge of the Mississippi operations of the line, told this reporter that ICG still has plans in place to abandon its unprofitable lines in the state, but the railroad prefers that secondary lines showing marginal profits may yet generate greater usage so they will remain a part of the system.

Last year ICG had its best year in history due to adjustments having been made in the line's operation, officials said, but apparently as important to the new optimism was the recent move by President Reagan to deregulate the railroads. Too, a new computer system in ICG's district service offices enables instant response to sales needs as compared with the old system hampered by time consuming regulations and telephone negotiations.

B.F. Smith, Delta Council official and moderator of the meeting last week, told the group that the "use it or lose it" proposition works both ways. Not only must shipping be assured for the line, he said, but business must not be lost because service is not available when it is needed.

Farmers have complained in recent years that the railroads could not deliver cars during the peak harvest season when they were needed most, and often they were forced to ship by more expensive modes. Cauley Cortright, Sharkey county farmer, pointed out at the delta meeting that it has taken him about two and a half weeks to get covered hopper cars for grain shipment.

J.R. Carter of Rolling Fork said it costs him 39 cents per bushel to ship grain to Gulf Coast terminals, and asked if the railroad could work out a system of grouping cars of grain to get grain to the river terminals more efficiently.

The railroad spokesmen pointed out that today most shipments are on shipper-owned cars which has freed many railroad-owned cars so that the car availability situation is greatly improved to the point that they see no immediate problems in car supply.

It was pointed out that federal funds have helped improve trackage on the main freight line between Memphis and Jackson, enabling safe speeds of freight trains of 49 miles per hour. The valley line, which runs between Lake Comorant and Vicksburg, with no federal funding for rehabilitation, is capable of safe freight train speeds of up to 25 miles an hour.

Bill Ball, director of the state's energy and transportation office, said he is impressed by the new posture of Illinois Central Gulf. He reported that Mississippi has 837 miles of trackage with 837 of those miles up for abandonment if they cannot manage to become more profitable to their parent line. Ball said a state multimodal transportation plan will be presented to the 1982 Mississippi legislature along with a request for $7 million of railroad revitalization funds to be loaned to rail lines whose future may depend on these loans.

It remains to be seen just how problematic proposed budgetary cuts may be on Mississippi's freight rail service — but it appears at long last that federal funds, notwithstanding, the main elements are falling in place to weld the merging present and future needs of railroaders, shippers and this state into an amended freight rail system whose future is no longer threatened by abandonment.

"I WOULDN'T TREAT MY BIKE THE WAY YOU TREAT YOUR BODY!"
—Judy Lafferty

When Judy Lafferty prepares for a race like the annual cross-country run, she makes sure her bike is in perfect shape. She inspects and adjusts every part. She tunes and balances the whole machine, so it can go the distance. Because she treats her body the same way, she discovered a lump in her breast a few years ago.

She discovered it early. And these days, 85% of early breast cancers can be treated successfully. Judy has since had reconstructive surgery too. And she feels like herself again. Alive, vibrant, ready to get on her bike and take on the world.

SHARE THE COST OF LIVING.

May 4, 1980

A year has come and gone Since the Lord took his Two sweet angels to heaven With him to stay. We often wonder & ask ourselves Why, but we know that God had planned It that way. You were the love & joy in all our hearts Not a day goes by that You're not in our thoughts. The short time you were Here on earth, You laughed together, You played together, And we know now that You're in heaven together. Sadly missed by loved ones.
